“Would it be possible to enhance colors rather than minimize them?” —Linda Frazier, St. Louis

JUST NOT MY TYPE

My husband retired almost 10 years ago and reads Boeing Frontiers religiously every month. Last night he was looking at the Service Awards pages and could not figure out why they started over with different names under the same number of years. I looked at it and told him that one was January and one was December. I thought he just missed it. Turns out he couldn't see that pale yellow type. I know he is color blind and maybe that had something to do with it, but a lot of men are color blind. He reads the paper front to back every day and points out things to me that I miss. He just got new glasses and doesn't have anything extraordinarily wrong with his eyes. My only conclusion is that some older folks are not able to see that really light print. Would it be possible to enhance colors rather than minimize them?

Editor's note: Thank you for your comments. We have adjusted the type color on our Service Awards pages.

Clarification:

- Balcony viewpoints for tours of the Everett, Wash., factory will be outfitted sometime in 2009 with new see-through barriers (December 2008/January 2009, Page 24).
