

A THOUSAND 767s ... AND COUNTING

Past and present 767 employees, retirees, suppliers and airline customers last month celebrated the rollout of the 1,000th 767 to be produced at the Everett, Wash., plant. The 767-300 ER (Extended Range) was delivered to All Nippon Airways. The event took place in the new, more efficient 767 production bay. PHOTO: GAIL HANUSA/BOEING

Quotables

“We bet our future on the 787 and we have a lot of faith in the Boeing people.”

– Jeff Smisek, president and CEO of the merged airlines United and Continental, in an interview at the Commercial Airplanes senior leadership meeting in Seattle, Feb. 9.

“Every commander said, ‘Hey, you’ve got it right.’”

– Lt. Col. Brad Killen, U.S. Army product manager for the Boeing CH-47F Chinook helicopter, who traveled to Afghanistan to see what users thought about the F model. As reported in the Jan. 20 issue of Defense Daily.
